pline, providing scope for healthy debate and understanding the politics of the unknown," she adds.

Committed to excellence, especially in the field of liberal arts, LSR has produced leaders like scholar Nivedita Menon, ex-RBI deputy governor Usha Thorat and danseuse Geeta Chandran to name a few. "At LSR, we strive for excellence. Every girl in this college is trained to not only be exemplary in academics and extra-curriculars, but to be a socially responsible citizen and a driver of change," says principal Dr Suman Sharma. One reason why perhaps the institution has produced some of the biggest feminist trailblazers in the country.

"SRCC is a unique place with an open environment that provides students an opportunity to grow and tap into their potential."

RAJENDRA PRASAD RUSTAGI, ACTING PRINCIPAL, SRCC

WHAT'S exciting

- College festival 'Crossroads', had the likes of Farhan Akhtar and Mohit Chauhan performing this year
- 30-odd societies, from fashion to stock markets
- Annual business conclave, a platform for top business leaders of the country to interact with students
- Enactus, an organisation to nurture businesses for the poor
- Irfaans, the quintessential college hangout place with the "best Maggi and bhujia patty in the world"

big company, it is more about finding fulfilment, which could mean different things for different people. SRCC, with its 30-odd societies, exchange programmes, events is hoping to provide students with a nurturing environment which gives them enough interface with the real world.

This year, for its annual Business Conclave, completely organised by the students, three Indian business leaders—Adi Godrej, Sunil Bharti Mittal and G.M. Rao came and shared their insights on setting up successful businesses. "It was conceived, run and managed entirely by the students, right from contacting the speakers to getting sponsorship," says Rajendra Prasad Rustagi, acting principal.

It was this all-inclusive approach that brought Anant Mohta to SRCC from Bengaluru. "At SRCC, the experience I get is far more practical. The syllabus is the same as other DU colleges but I wouldn't have got the practical experience I am getting here," says Mohta, a first year BCom Honours student. He is also part of an SRCC organisation called Enactus which works on building businesses for poor people and is quite active in the debating circuit. A debate a week is the norm. The range of societies students can opt for is fairly extensive, from fashion, music, dance, photography to financial investment and Dalal Street.

There is also a robust international student exchange programme wherein students get the opportunity to spend a few months in a reputed college abroad. This year, students will be headed to Amsterdam University. SRCC was host to students from Penn State University (USA) in January this year.

Reacting to the changing dynamics of the Indian economy, the college has also started special sessions on supply chain management and accounting frauds. Recently, Ernst & Young came
