Objective: The conference aims to provide information about considering successors in identifying potential candidates who have interest in continuing the family business and the factors affecting family business.

The Round Table Conference on “Grooming Youngsters in Family Business” was organized to find the heirs' level of preparation, family relationships, and planning and control activities are the three groupings of controllable or internal elements impacting family business transfers. As a result, the elder generation is focused on preparing and grooming the younger generation not only in terms of sectoral competence, but also in terms of management and culture. The session was enriched by resource persons from various sectors and they shared their experiences with the budding students.

Learning outcome:

- Make a list of possible candidates.
- Determine the level of interest of the candidates you think are suitable.
- Create a set of measurable criteria to use when evaluating possible successors.
- Examine the candidates to see where their abilities and experience are lacking.
